

Mera Peak Climbing with Heli Shuttle - 14 Days

Mera Peak Climbing with Heli back to Kathmandu is an adventurous journey that involves climbing Mera Peak (6,476 meters), the highest trekking peak in the Mahalangur Himalayas, Nepal, and then returning from Khare to Lukla and further back to Kathmandu via Helicopter.

The additional adventure is the opportunity to soar in the sky in a helicopter directly from Khare to Kathmandu, wondering at the striking views of the atrocious Nepali Himalayas.

Mera Peak with Heli Shuttle

Mera Peak Climbing is a straightforward and non-technical journey, unlike any other climbing peak in Nepal. However, if you have a great sense of adventure and thrill, your determination might be enough for this extreme journey. Nonetheless, a good fitness level is crucial to embark on this implausible journey.

This journey offers us the world's most attractive scene from the summit, including the outstanding sight of five eight-thousand-meter-high mountains simultaneously - Everest, Lhotse, Makalu, Kanchenjunga, and Cho-Oyu.

MERA PEAK CLIMBING WITH HELI SHUTTLE: CLIMBING ROUTE

The journey to Mera Peak Climbing with Heli Shuttle begins once you land at Kathmandu (Tribhuvan International Airport). After the preparation in Kathmandu the next day, we fly to Lukla and begin our trek.

In seven days, we will walk passing the quaint settlements of Chhutang, Thulikharka, Ramailo, Kothe, Thaknak, and Khare, and we will reach Mera Peak High Camp. This combined journey offers you an opportunity to indulge in the beauty of the Khumbu region. Considered as a less traveled journey in the Everest region, offers the taste of the remote and traditional life of the Sherpa people.

And the highlight of the trip is unquestionably attaining the top of the peak and getting to see the breathtaking snowy landscape all around the Himalayas vistas. After the accomplishment of the journey, we will fly back to Lukla from Khare via Heli and further back to Kathmandu to complete the entire adventure.

BEST TIME FOR MERA PEAK CLIMBING

As with most other trekking peaks in Nepal, climbing Mera is possible in three seasons: Spring (March to May), Autumn (September to November), and Winter (December to February). The atmospheric conditions and temperature are almost similar in the Himalaya regions in the respective seasons due to the geographical variations.

Among the three, Autumn and Spring are considered the best seasons for Mera Peak Climbing. Each season consists of almost three months.

Mera Peak Climbing in Autumn

Autumn, the most popular season for Mera Peak Climbing, lasts from September through November and features the busiest trails when the air is crisp and greenery is everywhere. It is the period of the beautiful sky and unobstructed mountain panoramas.

The weather is perfect, the temperature is stable, and everything is gorgeous from every aspect. The autumn flowers bloom in the villages, and it is the festival time in Nepal, and everything is colorful. From mid-September to late November, the weather is steady, clear, and dry. Thus, most of the climbers choose autumn for the Mera Peak journey.

Mera Peak Climbing in Spring

Spring months – March to May are another good period for climbing Mera Peak. The characteristics of Spring are similar to autumn. The weather is stable and dry, the mountains are full of snow, looking splendid, the hills are covered with rhododendron and other spring flowers, and the routes are full of hikers and climbers. The route to Mera Peak via Makalu Barun National Park are brilliantly decorated with a variety of bright flowers and vegetation.

Travelers wishing to play with nature and alpine vegetation can choose the spring season, which will be the best option for them. The dry and sunny weather results in a great vision of the environment.

Among the three months, the first weeks of March are colder because of the recent winter. Thus, you should pack warm clothing if you are planning for those periods. Likewise, if you are planning late May, you can witness occasional rainfall and clouds because of the approaching monsoon. Thus, April will be the best time for Mera Peak Climbing in Spring without any hassles.

Mera Peak Climbing in Winter

For climbing peaks and high mountain vistas, winter and summer are considered off-peak seasons. However, if you are an adventure lover, climbing trekking peaks (Mera, Island, and Lobuche) are possible in winter periods with a bit more preparation.
